Our mission

To provide high-quality translation services by native and non-native speaker translators on a timely basis and at reasonable rates. "For us, Quality always matters".

OPAL translators, editors, and reviewers?

In addition to being a native speaker of the target language and a certified language translation professional, OPAL translators, editors, and reviewers have the following:

Our priorities

Superior Quality. Professional and competent editors thoroughly check every translation work to achieve the highest quality possible. We are dedicated to high-quality translation. No students, no rookies, no outsiders - we employ only professional and experienced translators with extensive knowledge of relevant businesses and terminology. Moreover, our bank of translation memories and real-word term glossaries makes it possible to maximize terminology consistency and translation adequacy.

Availability. If you use the Internet, you can contact us through e-mail. This is a very fast and convenient way to do business with us. Reliability. We always meet deadlines for all orders from our clients.

Competitive Rates. Our rates are the most affordable among translation agencies worldwide. We use many techniques that help us to reduce the cost of a translation without a decrease in quality. Save more on interpretation through the Internet and our agency!

- A university degree in language translation, linguistics, or a technology-related field. Many have master's or doctorate degrees, as well as scientific and/or technical backgrounds.
- Background knowledge of the client's industry.
- Several years of experience in the translation industry (over five years on average), including experience translating technology-related terminology and working with computer software.

We translate into more than 20 languages!

We repeatedly check our work to make sure you're getting the quality you deserve - and more.

WHY
CHOOSE OPAL
LEGAL?

We can offer a full range of legal language services, including all types of certified, legalized, notarized, and sworn translations, provision of interpreters for client or witness meetings and court appearances, proofreading, transcription, and DTP and typesetting. As experts in legal translation, we understand the nature of the legal industry and work together with our clients to provide bespoke language solutions. As financial translation experts, we partner with global banks, fund managers, and accountancy firms.

What process does opal use to localize each project?

Our localization process is stable yet flexible enough to address your individual needs. The following is an example of our software localization process:

A) Assign a project manager

The project manager oversees your project from beginning to end. He or she also communicates with you throughout the process, so you're aware of what's going on every step of the way. His or her responsibilities include:

1. Establish a production schedule and process catered to meet your specific needs.
2. Allocate the necessary resources.
3. Manage each phase of development and follow-up with involved personnel.
4. Implement quality assurance checks.
5. Report progress to you.
6. Solicit and incorporate your feedback.
7. Deliver the final product.

C) Prepare your files

Once we receive the necessary files from you, we do the following:

1. Confirm which target language(s) you want your product translated into, including, if applicable, which variation of the language(s) — for example, English into Arabic, English into German, and so on.
2. Check the integrity of each file. Confirm the file type and make sure we can access it.
3. Create a glossary.
4. Create a translation memory in TRADOS using previously translated company materials (When available).

Project managers make sure you're comfortable and satisfied every step of the way.

B) Select team members

In addition to a project manager, the team assigned to your project may include the following:

- Terminologists — ensure that translated terminology is accurate and that it's consistent with industry standards and previous translations.
- Translators — translate online text and hardcopy documents from the source language to the target language(s).
- Editors — review text and make sure it conveys the text's original meaning; ensure that text is grammatically and structurally correct and that it complies with rhetorical standards in the target language.
- Desktop publishing specialists — ensure that the final product has the same look and feel as the original; help access graphic-embedded text so it can be translated; ensure that graphics are appropriate, accurate, and complete.
- Software engineers — ensure that code is maintained properly and that it's appropriate for the new location (e.g., double-byte enabling); compile localized software components if necessary.
- Quality assurance specialists — monitor each phase of the process to ensure that the end product works properly and that it will accommodate the target market. Once selected, team members take time to learn about you and your product as necessary, so they know exactly what you want and how to create it.

D) Translate accompanying support literature

Once the software and online help are complete, we translate the corresponding documentation. Then we:

1. Confirm the accuracy of the translation and adjust the text if necessary.
2. Make sure the text is consistent with the software and the help system.
3. Re-check the graphics. Make sure they correlate with the newly translated software and help system.
4. Finalize the layout. Confirm that the layout is consistent with the original document.
5. Confirm the quality of the finished product. Make sure everything is accurate, consistent, and attractive.
6. Solicit and incorporate client feedback.
7. Check the quality of the new version again.
8. If requested, prepare computer files to go to the printer (output to postscript).
9. Deliver the final product.
